It is surprising that no systematic study of Irish political economy has been undertaken. In this book the contributors redress this glaring omission in the history of political economy for the first time, providing an overview of developments in Irish political economy from the seventeenth to the twentieth century. Logistically, this is achieved through the provision of individual contributions from a group of recognized experts, both Irish and international, who address the contribution of major historical figures in Irish political economy, along with the analysis of major thematic issues, schools of thought, and major policy debates within the Irish context over this extended period.

Both political economy and foreign policy have been transformed in the sixteen states of West Africa at the start of the 1990s because of interrelated external factors: the end of the Cold War and the start of a new international division of labour, and internal factors: national structural adjustment programmes. Sixteen leading analysts of new regional relations of both cooperation and conflict offer original, revisionist insights into ECOWAS and ECOMOG, debt and democracy reform, and resistance. The mixture of case studies and comparative analyses constitutes a comprehensive overview of West African actors, issues, structures, perspectives, and possibilities at the end of the century, with relevance for development discourses and directions in other peripheral regions. Together, these offer timely redefinitions and reconceptualisations of central notions like civil society, diplomacy, foreign policy, peacekeeping, security, and self-reliance for political economies and cultures throughout the South.
